

when the Goths rose up in arms ([134], p. 443). John Crysostom died in 407 A.D., Alaric became famous in 385 A.D. and king of the Goths since 396 A.D. ([134], p. 446), died in 410 or 411 A.D. Thus, we obtain 25 years for Alaric, who ruled in 396–411 A.D.; 32 years for the Goths' revolt and Alaric in 378–410 A.D.; 29 years for John Crysostom, who ruled in 378–410 A.D. and Alaric; and 30 years for John Crysostom, who ruled in 378–407 A.D. We fix 25 and 32 years, though 29 and 30 years are more suitable, but more formal.

11a. Jehoahaz ("grasped by God")	11b. Theodosius I
11.1a. Followed in Jeroboam's footsteps (2K 13), and he is no different from previous kings except Jehu	11.1b. Was ardent Christian ([134], p. 444)
11.2a. Being "grasped by God" he was God's (Yahweh's = Jehu's) son	11.2b. Could also be regarded as God's "property" by church chronicler, since it was he on whom Goths stormed during their first revolt in 378 A.D., and it was under him that comet appeared (in 390 A.D.; God's = Yahweh's sign)
11.3a. Jehoahaz's reign was marked by single, but very hard war with Hazael, king of Syria (2K 13:3)	11.3b. Theodosius' rule was marked by long and hard war with Goths (ibid.)
11.4a. Bible described Hazael's invasion just as barbaric (2K 13)	11.4b. Goths' invasion was barbaric from stand-point of empire's chronicles
11.5a. Jehoahaz lost, but came to terms with Hazael (2K 13)	11.5b. Theodosius I succeeded in concluding (temporary) agreement with Goths in 386 A.D. [128, 134]
11.6a. Reigned 17 years (2K 13:1)	11.6b. Ruled for 16 years in 379–395 A.D. ([128], p. 793)
12a. Jehoash or Joash ("given by God")	12b. Arcadius
12.1a. Jehoash was Jehoahaz's son (2K 13:10–11)	12.1b. Arcadius was Theodosius' son ([134], p. 445)
12.2a. Jehoash was accompanied by powerful prophet Elisha, whose orders were at one time laws for Jehoash (2K 13)	12.2b. Arcadius was accompanied by powerful prophet John Crysostom, whose orders were laws for Arcadius in 400–401 A.D.
12.3a. "Then Elisha died ... Year after year Moabite raiders used to invade the land" (2K 13:20–21)	12.3b. John Crysostom died in 407 A.D., and the following (!) year, 408 A.D., Alaric again invaded empire (ibid.)
